

J. Virgil Peavy Memorial Award

Virgil Peavy spent 32 years at CDC teaching biostatistics and trained more than 25,000 health professionals in state and local public health departments and around the world. The J. Virgil Peavy Memorial Award, established in 2003 by the EIS Alumni Association, recognizes and current EIS officer for the oral presentation that best exemplifies the effective and innovative application of statistics and epidemiologic methods in an investigation or study.
